Dialectic Between the States in Middle East and Army Groups

Haoues Taguia
Middle East Program
Aljazeera Centre for Studies

The main trend in the region is the decrease of state power to control its territory and population and the empowerment of local army group who challenges the states and limits its capacities to govern.

In this view, we don’t focus on the religion or ethnic factors but on politic characteristic because the phenomena embrace different identities consideration.

- What are the factors of this dynamic?
- What will be the perspectives for the region?

*Haoues Taguia is an Algerian scholar. He is currently the Head of Middle East program at Aljazeera Centre for Studies, which focuses on the geopolitics of the Middle East and its surrounding regions. For the last twenty years, Haoues has been a regular media contributor and analyst on politics of MENA and the North Africa. Before assuming his current position, he was involved in academic research and teaching in Algeria. His research interests focus on geopolitics, Asymmetric strategy, Islamic movements, and political transformation processes.